

One important consideration is that many of the cell phones are equipped with GPS and can be tracked. From a security perspective, I am not sure this is a good idea. Some cell phone usage is incredibly annoying and would be even more so on the confined space of an aircraft.